5

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A portable electronic device with which an owner of the device makes use of a specific application program and a method for issuing the device. An unissued IC card can be written with the specific data without satisfying the security function of the IC card. After the issuance of the IC card, the security function becomes valid and each IC card requires satisfaction of the security function in case of data writing or data rewriting.